The London Chronicle is credited with penning this verse after the Badgers had handed a particularly ferocious beating to the local team at Hurlington, resulting in the hospitalisation of three of their players and the death of the referee.

“Remove your boots and stow your pride
The Badgers are out, they came to ride Unsaddle your horse and away your mallet Swig that drink to settle your palate I’ve told you once and I’ve told you twice
The Badgers are out, run for your life Aggressive, impressive, fearless and brave
You ride against them, you ride to your grave”.
