Dick Harper A.K.A. Rattlesnake

When the English businessman set foot in Bangalore to negotiate an open trade in Tea, no-one expected he would fall in love with “the Game of Kings”, taking permanent residence and leaving his family behind. Holds the record for most children in another country.

The London Chronicle is credited with penning this verse after the Badgers had handed a particularly ferocious beating to the local team at Hurlington, resulting in the hospitalisation of three of their players and the death of the referee.

“Remove your boots and stow your pride
The Badgers are out, they came to ride
Unsaddle your horse and away your mallet
Swig that drink to settle your palate
I’ve told you once and I’ve told you twice
The Badgers are out, run for your life
Aggressive, impressive, fearless and brave
You ride against them, you ride to your grave”.
